TOO MUCH OF A PRISON AIR.

Dr. Spink Has One Criticism of Reform School for Girls.

Dr. Spink, one of the members of the Board of State Charities, in discussing the Girls' Reform School before the full meeting of the board, spoke as follows: "One criticism I feel called upon to make in regard to the Reform School is that through being associated with the prison, those in charge have come to regard all as prisoners. It seems to me that more liberty might be allowed without interfering with a proper discipline. It is to be much regretted that the prison was not made a separate institution. Had the Reform School been entirely apart from any other institution it might be given the advantages already given the boys' school. Classes in farming, book-binding, printing, carpentering and plumbing might be formed, as all these would be practical openings for young women. A school of design and interior decoration would also be a wise addition, as I found several girls with a decided talent for drawing and painting."

CLODFELTER'S ELECTRIC SCHEME.

Work on Track Between Marion and Anderson to Begin Soon.

Noah J. Clodfelter, general manager of the Indianapolis, Anderson & Marion electric railway, says that work on the track will begin at Anderson within the next ten days. The first section of the line will be built from Anderson to Marion. He says that $120,000 worth of material has been purchased, and that the road will be completed by Sept. 1, 1896. The New York Standard Construction Company will build the road.

THE REGENTS CHOSEN

SOLDIERS' MONUMENT COMMISSION FINALLY MAKES A SELECTION.

Gen. Lew Wallace, Gen. Fred Kneller and Major Menzies Named—Probable President.

The three monument regents created under the law ousting the old commission were yesterday appointed by the commission consisting of Governor Matthews, Secretary of State Owen, Auditor of State Daily and Treasurer of State Scholz. The regents who are to complete the monument are General Lew Wallace, General Fred Kneller and Major G. V. Menzies. The last is a Democrat and an intimate friend and counselor of the Governor, whose attorney he is in prison litigation. The appointing board was in session for about an hour and heard a statement from Attorney-general Ketcham. The latter stayed only long enough to learn that George J. Langsdale was not to be elected and then he retired. The appointing power canvassed the names of Mr. Langsdale, Daniel M. Ramsdell, John E. Cleland, Major Mulvey, a Mexican war veteran, living in Bloomington, William H. English and the gentlemen who were selected. Governor Matthews announced that he had asked Mr. English to allow his name to be used for reappointment on the board as one of the regents, but Mr. English declined, saying that he thought the board should be composed of new men entirely. The result was especially pleasing to Mr. English. He said last night that no better board of regents could have been selected.

The new board will meet to organize in the near future, it is said, providing that those appointed signify their acceptance. General Lew Wallace and Mr. Menzies were not in town and it is not known whether they will accept or not. It was thought, however, about the Statehouse that they would, though General Wallace once refused to take a position on the old commission. It is known that Major Menzies was not a candidate and was rather adverse to being appointed. He is generally taken for granted that General Kneller will be the president and administrative head of the regency. His home is in this city and he has always taken a lively interest in the monument. He was seen last night and said: "I did not know that I had been selected as one of the regents until General Foster called at my house after supper to tell me of it. I was not a candidate and have not sought the place. The idea of serving as a regent is one I have not thought of and I cannot say even that I will accept. But if I accept I will try to follow the law and will use my influence to cause the monument to be a great work of art and a world ever saw. I have a deep interest in it, as all soldiers have, but I cannot as yet say anything about details."

General Kneller was born in Hungary, in 1834, and came with his parents to America in early childhood. His parents settled in Indianapolis in 1850, since which time General Kneller, except when at the front during the war, has been a continuous resident. He was a deputy in the office of John New, Governor of the country, and was reading law at the same time. The war breaking out, he was one of the first to enlist, becoming a lieutenant in the Eleventh Indiana, which had Lew Wallace, now his colleague on the monument regency, for its colonel. He was shortly promoted to the rank of captain for gallant service and later was colonel of the Seventy-ninth Regiment. He won a brevet brigadier generalship. He was for many years a partner with John Hanna in the law business after the war. General Kneller was appointed pension agent by President Hayes and was reappointed by President Arthur, serving eight years. This is the only office he has held. He has been prominent in local politics as a Republican. He is a man of positive character and clearly defined opinions. His friends declare that he is well fitted for the charge that seems likely to be his in large measure as president of the board. He is a wide reader on art subjects and has made himself familiar with the great monuments of the world.

A MISSIONARY CONVENTION.

Semi-Annual Meeting of the Ladies of M. E. Conference.

The thirty-fourth semi-annual district convention of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church was held yesterday at Central-avenue Church. This is the Indianapolis district of the Southeast Indiana Conference, and includes churches in Southport, Franklin, Greentfield, Shelbyville, Irvington, Haughville, Fletcher place, Hall place, Roberts Park, Grace Church and Central avenue. Of these the Central-avenue Church has the largest membership, there being 129 members in its missionary society. Mrs. F. A. Sullivan, president of the convention, occupied the chair at both morning and afternoon sessions. The devotional hour, "The Relation of Prayer to Our Work," was led by Mrs. H. Schindler. Mrs. Buchtel welcomed the members to the church and Mrs. M. C. Goe made the response for the other churches. Each auxiliary in the conference was represented by a delegate, who gave the report of her own society, showing its field and labor. Mrs. E. G. Cornelius, in a paper, discussed "Systematic and Proportionate Giving." The members were also allowed a few minutes in which to discuss the same subject. A reading was given by Mrs. M. S. Hopkins. After Mrs. Diasette gave her report as corresponding secretary a luncheon was served by the members of Central-avenue Church. Mrs. L. O. Robinson, who has been a mission worker, and whose experiences are of interest, talked on the early work of missionary societies. An open parliament was held by Miss E. Stangl, conference secretary, the topic being the encouragements and the discouragements of the missionary work and the worker. Miss L. N. Marsee gave an illustrated exercise on "Remnants," which dealt with what is known as "The Submerged Tenth." Reports were heard from the various committees, the conference treasurer, Mrs. R. C. Matt and District Treasurer Mrs. S. W. Juday. The conference, as well as the district, has accomplished much in the last six months, and both have reason to feel encouragement for their efforts. During the day the exercises were varied with music and recitations. Mrs. Van Arsdale, Miss Johnson, Kenneth McIntosh and others participated. The conference will meet in Central-avenue Church in September, and Mrs. Sullivan invited the members of the societies present to attend the meetings.

Ed Lewis, Guarded by Police at the City Hospital, Escapes.

A tramp who gave his name as Ed Lewis escaped from the City Hospital yesterday morning, between 3 and 4 o'clock, where he was under police surveillance on a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill. Patrolman West was detailed to watch the man, and last night while he was eating his lunch, Lewis, who has only one leg, took up his crutch and went to a closet, as he has been in the habit of doing. After he had finished his lunch West went to see why Lewis had not returned and found that he had escaped. A search was made for him, but without avail. Lewis placed and several other tramps, known as James Mortimer, were enjoying a keg of beer in the Vandallia railroad yards some days ago, when they became involved in a fight in which Mortimer struck Lewis in the face. They then became quiet and short time afterward Lewis slipped up behind Mortimer and cut his throat with a razor. Mortimer then beat Lewis with the latter's crutch. Both men were in a precarious condition when arrested and taken to the hospital. Lewis had been stationed there day and night since to guard them, as they were both known to be bad men. The trial of the men was set for yesterday morning, but the hospital physicians declared that Lewis was not able to leave the hospital. However, Lewis was only shamming, for he managed to disappear, although he left his wooden leg and most of his clothes behind him.

Early Indianapolis Masonry.

The Bowen-Merrill Company has issued, in a neatly printed pamphlet of thirty-eight pages, a "History of Early Indianapolis Masonry," by Hon. W. E. English, past master of Center Lodge, No. 23. This was the first lodge established in the city, and for about twenty-five years had the field to itself. In point of age it is the tenth in the State. It came into existence March 27, 1822, and since that date has numbered among its officers and members many of the most prominent men of Indianapolis. The pamphlet of Mr. English is chiefly and essentially a history of Center Lodge, for the reason that the twenty-five years during which it had no competitor covers the period of "early" Indianapolis Masonry. The author has done his work in compact yet thorough manner, and the pamphlet contains everything of its title implies. It is also published by the Indiana Historical Society in Volume 3 of their publications.

WILL DEMAND THE SCHEDULE.

A Strike of Iron Molders Quite Probable This Morning.

A large number of union iron molders will in all probability refuse to go to work this morning, although no general strike of molders has as yet been ordered by the union. Another meeting was held last night, and it was resolved that the union men should not work for wages lower than those demanded in the new schedule, which has been presented to the various firms. The resolution, however, does not prohibit the men from returning to work in those shops where the desired scale of prices is recognized. Vice President Valentine reported last night that he had visited the remainder of the firms, and that several had spoken favorably of the demands of the union, saying that the men deserved better wages, but that at present it is impossible to give them what they desire.

According to the resolution there will be a number of good workmen who will not return to work this morning, as it is known that several of the firms will absolutely refuse to give the prices set by the union. A great many of the men in attendance at the meeting last night spoke as if they were already on a strike, as they seemed to understand that they need expect no rates from their employers. Those who are refused the prices set by the union will receive $7 per week from the union while they are out of work.

J. B. Alfrey, of the J. B. Alfrey Company, was asked last night what action he would take with reference to the demands advanced by the molders. "We have never recognized the organization in the least," he said, "and we will hardly begin now. We have a number of men working for us who are asked $2.25 and $2.50 a day, as asked by the union, and several others deserve the raise and will in all probability receive it, providing they ask for it as individuals and do not join any strike movement. As for the demands of the union, we will not take them into consideration. What will you do when the men demand the raise in the morning, stating that they will not return to work unless it is granted?" "Those who wish to return to work may do so, and those who wish to quit have that privilege," John L. Ketcham, of the Haugh-Ketcham iron works, was also asked as to what action his company would take in regard to the matter. He replied that the company had discharged most of their men, as they had worked for few molders since the steel frames in constructing buildings had come so popular. He said it would make little difference to his company if all the molders quit.
